

Sketches during corona

When corona came I was studying Art Therapy at the HAN in Nijmegen. Suddenly I couldn't go anywhere anymore. As a result I got depressed...for a long time I didn't do anything. I stopped art all together. But when I realized that corona was gonna take longer than i thought, i started slowly sketching again. I started drawing my feelings because I couldn't bottle it up anymore. And even though the sketches are small they are special to me. These sketches changed the way I drew. Because by looking more at my environment I learned that composition can play an important role in conveying an emotion in an image. And these sketches would later turn into the foundation of my way of painting.
